

JANET'S CABIN Summer Use Parking Directions

Parking for Janet's Cabin in both the summer and winter is at Copper Mountain, but at different locations. Summer parking directions are as follows:

Enter Copper Mountain at the main entrance just off of I-70, turning onto Copper Road. Drive approximately 1/2 mile and turn left at a stop sign onto Ten Mile Circle. Drive up Ten Mile Circle to a cul-de-sac and look for the parking structure on the south side of the road. You may park in either the upper or lower deck, but Copper Mountain requests that you park either in a corner or against a wall if possible. Leave your parking permit with the date you expect to return and a contact phone number. If possible, please use the cell phone of someone in your party. Cell coverage is generally good at the hut.

Access to the Colorado Trail:

Janet's Cabin is accessed only by foot or mountain bike via the Colorado Trail (NO HORSES). To get to the Colorado Trail from the parking structure is a short distance following these instructions (total distance ~7.1 miles):

From the parking structure, go to the Burning Stones Plaza. From the Plaza, there is a short access trail on the left side of the plaza as you look up the ski area runs. This trail joins the Colorado Trail after about 150 yards. The Colorado Trail is marked at this junction by a large, low-lying, painted white rock with the Colorado Trail logo in green. Turn right at the rock, onto the Colorado Trail which runs along a small drainage ditch. The ditch trail joins up with an access road; stay on the access road for approximately 500 yards (passing below the American Eagle Chairlift, this is a relatively straight shot, you should climb gradually without changing direction). Next, look for the Colorado Trail which is once again marked with a low-lying, painted white rock. From there, stay on the Colorado Trail, watching for wooden sign posts with the Colorado Trail logo and arrows at intersections with Copper Mountain Stables trails. Be aware that this section of the Colorado Trail receives moderate mountain bike use and approximately 1/3 mile of the trail is utilized by Copper Mountain Stables and has considerable horse impacts. After you leave Copper Mountain, the trail enters into the beautiful Guller Creek valley and climbs moderately with no spurs or side trails to above treeline, Janet's Cabin and beyond. The short spur trail to the hut takes off from the Colorado Trail above the cabin at approximately 11,800' and is signed. PLEASE DO NOT SHORT CUT THE TRAIL BY CUTTING THROUGH THE WOODS OR WALKING ON THE ALPINE TUNDRA.

Janet's Cabin is located in the White River National Forest and operates under a special use permit from the Forest Service-USDA. SHA is an equal opportunity service provider.

Use of Janet's Cabin by One Group: SHA realizes that groups that reserve all of the spaces at the cabin are seeking privacy. SHA will inform any maintenance personnel or volunteers staying in the Hutmaster's Quarters of the cabin to respect the privacy of the cabin guests. However, SHA is not able to prevent volunteers or hutmasters from staying in the cabin when one group has booked the upstairs. Groups that reserve the entire hut are asked to not overcrowd the cabin by bringing more guests than the reservation allows (maximum 14 guests). Overcrowding causes significant maintenance problems such as filling the composting toilet beyond its capacity and draining the resources of the cabin.

Hutmasters Quarters: Janet's Cabin has a separate Hutmasters Quarters that will be occupied regularly by maintenance personnel, volunteers and guides. All persons staying at the cabin will have a confirmation letter.

Self-Reliance Required: You are on your own on the trail and at Janet's Cabin. You must be self-reliant and prepared for emergencies. Plan ahead and be prepared to execute a self-rescue. No Day Use at Janet's Cabin:

Because of the limited resources of the cabin and the need to fly in all supplies by helicopter, Janet's Cabin is for overnight use by advance reservation and fee only. Day use is not permitted.

Do not leave valuables in your vehicle when parked at trailheads. SHA is not responsible for theft or vandalism to vehicles
